

Using Supported Decision Making in Employment: A Video Training Series

LEARN MORE:

SCAN HERE

Supported Decision Making (SDM) happens when people make their own decisions with the help of friends, family, and professionals. SDM can be helpful when looking for or keeping a job.

The video series includes interviews with individuals and family members who share their experience with SDM and employment. We thank them for their time and valuable input.

Visit our website at www.DisRightsCT.org/SDM

This series will cover:

- An Overview of SDM
- Informed Choice and Employment
- SDM – The Journey from School to Employment
- SDM – The Journey to Employment in Adulthood

Stay tuned for live viewings of the videos with Q&A

This video training series was developed in collaboration with the Center for Public Representation.
